Re: Request for Publication of Opinion (Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 8.1120(a)(1))

Court of Appeal Case Number G044550;
Superior Court Number 30-2010-00369466
Orange County

Caron vs. Mercedes-Benz Financial Services USA
LLC at al.

To The Honorable Justices of the California Court of Appeal, Fourth
Appellate District, Division Three:

On behalf of the California New Car Dealers Association ("CNCDA"), having an interest in this matter based on its status as a California nonprofit mutual benefit corporation chartered to advance the interests of the new motor vehicle dealer industry in California<sup>1</sup>, pursuant to Rule 8.1120(a)(1), California Rules of Court ("CRC"), the undersigned hereby respectfully requests this Court to certify for publication the opinion of this Court in Caron v. Mercedes-Benz Financial Services USA LLC, et al. ("Caron").

Publication of the opinion is fully supported by the criteria for publication laid out in CRC 8.1105(c). Moreover, publication is extremely important because doing so will ease the burden members of CNCDA face from unrelenting efforts of litigants who continue to resist the enforcement of arbitration agreements on grounds prohibited by the Federal Arbitration Act (9 U.S.C. § 1 et. seq.; "FAA"), as clearly articulated by the U.S.

Supreme Court in AT&T Mobility LLC v. Concepcion (2011) 563 U.S. ____ [131 S.Ct. 1740] ("AT&T Mobility").

CRC 8.1105(c) Fully Supports Publication of the Opinion

CRC 8.1105(c) provides that an opinion by a court of appeal should be published if the decision meets at least one of the Rule's stated criteria as follows:

- (1) Establishes a new rule of law;
- (2) Applies an existing rule of law to a set of facts significantly different from those stated in published opinions;
- (3) Modifies, explains, or criticizes with reasons given, an existing rule of law;
- (4) Advances a new interpretation, clarification, criticism, or construction of a provision of a constitution, statute, ordinance, or court rule;
- (5) Addresses or creates an apparent conflict in the law;
- (6) Involves a legal issue of continuing public interest;
- (7) Makes a significant contribution to legal literature by reviewing either the development of a common law rule or the legislative or judicial history of a provision of a constitution, statute, or other written law;
- (8) Invokes a previously overlooked rule of law, or reaffirms a principle of law not applied in a recently reported decision; or
- (9) Is accompanied by a separate opinion concurring or dissenting on a legal issue, and publication of the majority and separate opinions would make a significant contribution to the development of the law.

Application of U.S. Supreme Court precedent to California's jurisprudence is central to the Caron decision. Thus, the decision addresses both a change in previously existing California law and the application of existing federal law to new facts. In doing so, several of the CRC 8.1105(c) criteria for publication are satisfied. Specifically, the decision:

- Applies an existing rule of law to a set of facts significantly different from those stated in published opinions (CRC 8.1105(c)(2)).

While AT&T Mobility also involved a consumer dispute in California, the industry at issue in AT&T Mobility was the wireless telephone business. On the other hand, Caron involves retail automotive sales made by a new motor vehicle dealer. The Caron decision demonstrates that the large footprint of regulation faced by California vehicle dealers under both statutory regulation of motor vehicle sales and finance transactions and consumer protection statutes cannot be used as a smokescreen to avoid applying federal law in a manner required by the clear precedent of the U.S. Supreme Court.

- Modifies, explains, or criticizes with reasons given, an existing rule of law (CRC 8.1105(c)(3)).

The Caron decision clearly explains why the relatively recent decision in Fisher v. DCH Temecula Imports LLC (2010) 187 Cal.App.4th 601 (Fisher, decided prior to the high court's AT&T Mobility decision, is no longer good law). This Court was required to undertake this task because the trial court, as reported in the Caron decision itself, felt bound by Fisher as recent California law on point, and believed the Court of Appeal would need to determine if Fisher remained good law following AT&T Mobility. As discussed below, by publishing the Caron decision, this Court will free future trial courts from the unnecessary burden of navigating between Fisher and AT&T Mobility.

- Advances a new interpretation, clarification, criticism, or construction of a provision of a constitution, statute, ordinance, or court rule (CRC 8.1105(c)(4)).

The Caron decision provides a very detailed and thorough analysis of the class action and anti-waiver provisions of the Consumer Legal Remedies Act, Civ. Code, § 1750 et seq. ("CLRA") (See p. 14-19, slip opn.), and how those provisions are to be interpreted and, ultimately, treated as preempted by the FAA and federal preemption doctrine.

- Makes a significant contribution to legal literature by reviewing either the development of a common law rule or the legislative or judicial history of a provision of a constitution, statute, or other written law (CRC 8.1105(c)(7)).

Significantly, the Caron decision clarifies and provides a detailed analysis of how the construct of preemption under federal law would be interpreted under California Supreme Court precedent given the facts of the case, explaining that "obstacle" preemption would be deemed involved where, as here, it would be impossible to concurrently observe the rules in both Fisher and AT&T Mobility (see p. 10, n. 3, slip opn.).

- Involves a legal issue of continuing public interest (CRC 8.1105(c)(6)).

CNCDA has received numerous firsthand accounts reflecting a very large number of lawsuits against its members and other dealers where arbitration provisions are being litigated, on issues such as the validity of Fisher, and whether there is something inherent in California law that would allow the U.S. Supreme Court's holding in AT&T Mobility to be avoided for certain types of California consumer claims. These lingering doubts and expensive litigation forays can be resolved by publication of the Caron decision, all to the continuing public benefit.

In summary, without the guidance that publication of the Caron decision would provide, the litigation that played itself out in Caron will be repeated again and again, and, just as the trial judge felt in Caron, judges will feel uncomfortable deeming Fisher overruled, and will again – wastefully – kick the case up to the Court of Appeal for the correct decision following a lengthy appeals process. Publication will remove the possibility of such a revolving door and will enhance judicial economy at both the trial and appellate levels.

Conclusion

CNCDA believes the publication of the decision in Caron will be beneficial to the public, the bar, and the administration of justice in the important area of recognition of arbitration agreements and applicable federal law. CNCDA therefore respectfully requests the Court to publish the decision.

Respectfully Submitted,
